INTRODUCTORY

IN presenting you this book it is not alone as a "souvenir," but to show you by actual illustrations what Fort Worth is, and what she has to offer the investor, homeseeker, merchant and manufacturer.

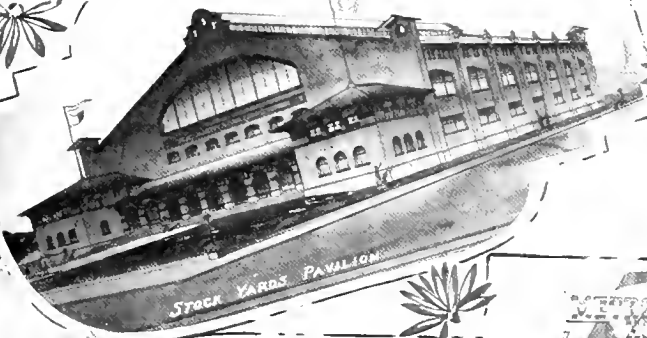

All of the views were made especially for this book, and it is with no little feeling of pride that we present it to you, believing it to represent a HIGH standard of the photographer, engraver and printer's art, and we trust our efforts will be appreciated.

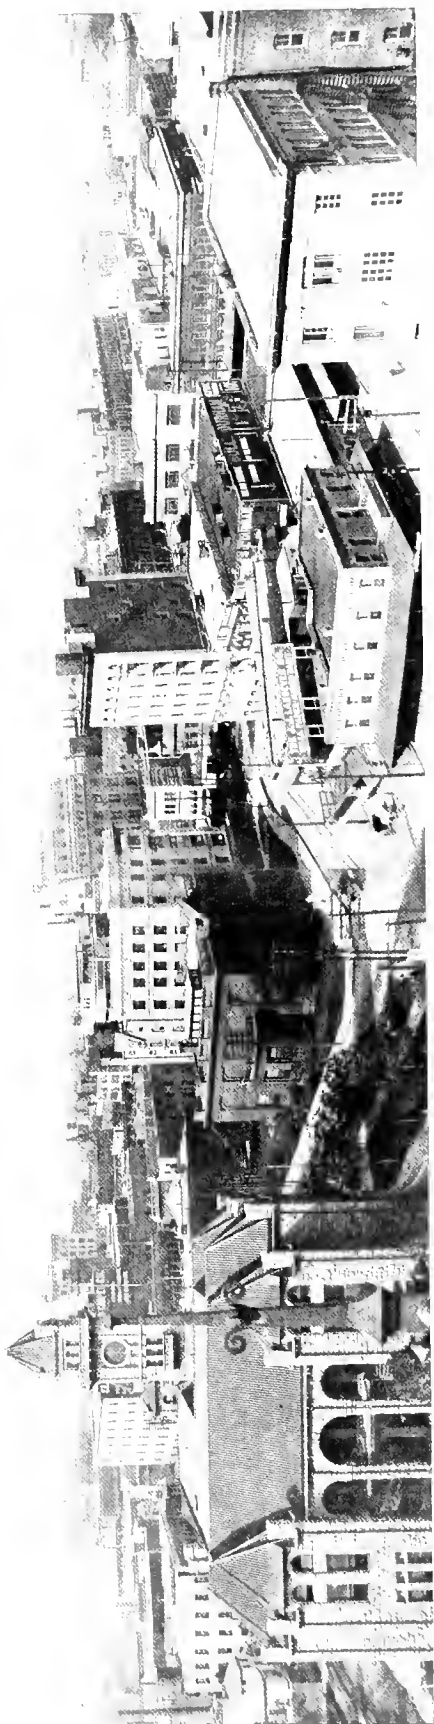

Yours very truly,

A. OWEN JENNINGS,

Fort Worth is the conceded railway center of the Southwest. Its unequalled railway facilities cannot fail to make it the commercial metropolis of this section.

Fort Worth is the packing house center and cattle market of the Southwest. History does not record an instance where a cattle market and packing house point has failed to make a thriving and prosperous city.

Fort Worth is the grain and milling center of the Southwest, which, added to the two last mentioned advantages, assures the growth and development of the trade and commerce of the city.

The pay roll of wage earners is over 13,000, receiving $9,000,000 wages per year.

The bank clearings of Fort Worth show a steady and unbroken increase, and for the year 1907 will approximate $400,000,000.

It has the purest water, a fine sewer system, and consequently the lowest death rate of any city in the country.

As a place of business, residence or for investment of capital it is without an equal.
